NORTH CAROLINA COMMUTING PATTERNS:
1980 Census of Population and Housing

In its broadest capacity, the North Carolina State Data Center serves to meet the needs for statistical information which arise from all areas of the State, both public and private sectors. From the needs of a county planner or state fiscal officer to the research data required by a professor, a boy-scout troop leader, or a market analyst, State Data Center personnel bring data user and data together, consult on the interpretation and proper use of information, and, in some cases, advise on the best design for the study in which the data are to be used.

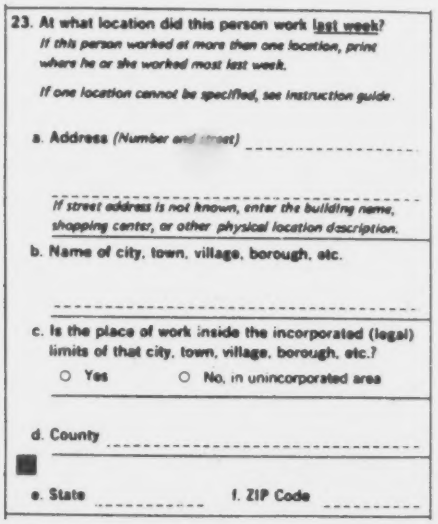
DATA SOURCES AND DESCRIPTION

All data for this report on North Carolina commuting patterns were processed from a special 1980 Census computer tape which was released to the North Carolina State Data Center in 1984. This "county commuter flows" data base provides machine readable information on the number of reported commuters from county A to county B for each such commuter flow in the nation. For purposes of this report, only those flows with a North Carolina origin or destination were tabulated. All data on the tape came from answers to question number 23 on the 1980 Census questionnaire.



23. At what location did this person work last week?
If this person worked at more than one location, print where he or she worked most last week.
If one location cannot be specified, see instruction guide.

a. Address (Number and street) _____

If street address is not known, enter the building name, shopping center, or other physical location description.

b. Name of city, town, village, borough, etc.

c. Is the place of work inside the incorporated (legal) limits of that city, town, village, borough, etc.?
○ Yes ○ No, in unincorporated area

d. County _____

e. State _____ f. ZIP Code _____

This question was asked only of persons who indicated that they had worked at any time during the reference week. Data were tabulated for workers 16 years old and over, that is, members of the Armed Forces and civilians who were at work during the reference week.

There are two major shortcomings of the commuting data about which users should be aware. First, only half of the full twenty percent census sample was utilized to tabulate these data due to Census Bureau restrictions. Therefore, figures in these tabulations may differ from data based on the full sample. For example, the total number of workers 16 years old and over in this report may not agree with the same category shown for means-of-transportation-to-work tabulations in other census reports. Secondly, many workers did not report a place of work in the census. In North Carolina 231,970 or 8.7 percent of all employed residents failed to report a place of work. Nonresponse to this particular question allows for the introduction of bias into the data, since the place of work of the nonrespondents has not been observed and may differ from place of work reported by respondents. As a result, any allocation procedure using repondent data may not completely reflect this difference. Therefore, no attempt has been made in this report to allocate a place of work to those workers who did not state a place. Some Federal agencies are working with the Census Bureau to make such allocations based on additional, non-census data. Also, the data to make a proportional adjustment are available in this publication for each county, if the user wishes to adjust.

In March 1974, the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina published a report titled "North Carolina Commuting Patterns, 1960 and 1970," in which census data had been adjusted for place of work not reported. Total in- or out- commuting from that report for the years 1960 and 1970 will not be strictly comparable to 1980 unadjusted data in this report. However, due to the nature of the proportional adjustment procedure used in the earlier report, net commuting and the commuting ratios will be slightly more comparable.

There are several other differences between this and the earlier commuting report. Data are presented here for all commuter flows, whereas the ESC publication was restricted to a maximum of twenty counties/metropolitan municipalities and all other origins or destinations were aggregated as "elsewhere". The twenty categories were determined prior to census data and were usually, but not always, those with the most commuting.

Data in the earlier report were presented for Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas [SMSA's as defined in 1970] and for the state's planning regions. Planning region summaries for 1980 may be generated and distributed to regional Affiliate Data Centers at a later date -- they are available through aggregation from this publication. Special reports on the number and characteristics of commuters are already available for SMSA's from the Bureau of the Census.

Definitions

County is defined according to legal county boundaries except in some states where independent cities are considered "county equivalents".

Reference week - The data on journey to work relate to the calendar week preceding the date on which the respondents completed their questionnaires. This week is not the same for all respondents since the enumeration was not completed in one week. However, for the majority of persons, the reference week for the 1980 Census was the last week of March 1980.

Place of work - Place of work refers to the geographic location at which workers carried out their occupational activities during the reference week. The exact address of the place of work was asked. If the person's employer operated in more than one location, the exact address of the location or branch where the respondent worked was requested. Persons who worked at more than one location were asked to report the one at which they worked the greatest number of hours during the reference week . Persons who regularly worked in several locations during the reference week were requested to give the address at which they began work each day.

Employed residents - Residents of the area 16 years old and over who were employed. An employed resident of an area may work inside the area or outside.

Persons working in county - All persons 16 years old and over who listed a place of work in the county. Each may or may not be a county resident.

Noncommuting workers - Those workers who do not leave their county of residence to work.

Net commuting - The difference between persons working in the county and employed residents of the county.

Total In Commuters - The total number of workers in the reference county who reside outside the county.

Total Out Commuters - The total number of workers residing in the reference county who leave the county to work.

Out commuters as a percentage of employed residents - Total out commuters from the reference county divided by total employed residents of the reference county, expressed as a percentage.

In commuters as a percentage of employed in county - Total in commuters to the reference county divided by total number of persons working in the county, expressed as a percentage.

Commuting ratio - The ratio of persons working in the county to employed residents of the county. A value of one implies zero net commuting; a value greater than one corresponds to net in commuting; less than one, to net out commuting.

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

North Carolina gains more workers from other states than it loses to other states, according to the 1980 Census commuting data. Of the 2,423,116 North Carolina residents who reported a place of work, 38,252 said they worked "outside of the state" in the week prior to the census. Of the total 2,387,287 persons who reported working in North Carolina, 40,675 lived in other states. Thus, the net gain between in commuters and out commuters was 2,423 workers. Statewide, 231,870 workers failed to report a place of work.

Net commuting from North Carolina's adjoining states was estimated at 1,267 net in commuting from Georgia, 9,325 from South Carolina, 382 from Tennessee, and 6,258 net out commuters to Virginia from North Carolina. These data are presented in Tables 1. and 2. The non-adjoining state of Floride contributed the fifth largest number of net in commuters at 1,218.

Commuting ratios in 1980 for counties ranged from .382 in Caswell County to 1.259 in Catawba. Net commuting was highest in Mecklenburg County at 45,367 and lowest in Davidson at -11,309.

Although 1980 and 1970 data are not strictly comparable with respect to values of in and out commuting, the figures for commuting ratios and net commuting are slightly more comparable. Therefore, the following comparisons are made with the understanding that 1980 data do differ in concept from that for the earlier years.

In a comparison of state level commuting among census years 1960, 1970 and 1980, the percentage of employed N. C. residents who worked outside the state was 0.13 percent in 1960, 1.46 percent in 1970, and 1.58 percent in 1980. The percentage of persons working in North Carolina who were residents of other states was 1.03 percent in 1960, 1.53 percent in 1970, and 1.70 percent in 1980. The census year commuting ratios were 0.9969, 1.0007, and 1.0010, respectively.

Commuting patterns showed significant changes during the period 1970 to 1980 in several North Carolina counties. The most outstanding of these was the increase in Washington County from a commuting ratio of .724 to 1.035. This represented a change of net commuting from -1,241 (leaving the county to work elsewhere in 1970) to 179 entering the county to work in 1980. The second largest gain in net commuting was experienced by Anson County with its commuting ratios of .763 in 1970 and .906 in 1980, a net commuting change from -1,989 to -869 workers. The most significant change in the opposite direction occurred in Martin County, which had commuting ratios of 1.108 in 1970 and .964 in 1980 and a change in net commuting from 911 to -382. See Table 4.

In 1980, 41 North Carolina counties had approximately no net commuting; that is, the number of in and out commuters tended to cancel. Commuting ratios were in the range of .94 to 1.06. By 1980, only 28 counties fell into this "equilibrium" category of no commuting. While in 1960, only 15 counties had very high instances of out commuting, expressed as commuting ratios of less than .80, 27 counties had high rates twenty years later. The 20 counties with very high in commuting (ratios of 1.06 or more) in 1980 represented an increase of 5 over the 15 counties with high ratios in 1960. Thus more incidences of extremes in both net in and net out commuting occurred in 1980 (and in 1970) than was the case in the 1960 census. In other words, intercounty commuting appears to have intensified in North Carolina. See Table 3 and Figures 1 - 3.
